Synopsis

In a Special Program dedicated to events in Syria, Sky News gave its viewers an exclusive and unfiltered view of the instability sweeping the country. They heard from victims and survivors of revenge attacks in the Latakia region, after deadly fighting broke out between fighters loyal to Bashar al Assad and forces affiliated to Syria's new rulers. Sky News also gained extremely rare access to Syria's forgotten jihadis, thousands of men from all over the world locked up for years inside Syria's ISIS prisons. Sky investigated the fears around a rebirth of the terror group, as instability and violence help ISIS become a resurgent threat in the region. Reporting from different parts of the country Sky's Chief Correspondent, Stuart Ramsay, and Sky's Special Correspondent, Alex Crawford, both filed hard hitting eyewitness journalism from a country desperately trying to avert disaster.

The material aired in the World which, for this edition, was presented by Anna Botting.
